

2020-02-18 | conference review | Germany | advanced motor fuels

Renewable Fuels Are Crucial

Discussions and presentations at the 17th International Conference on Renewable Mobility focus on the impact of the German government's climate protection package and the new European Commission's "Green Deal". The European Commission intends to ramp up its climate protection efforts through the "Green Deal", which is also designed to ensure sustainable and intelligent mobility. Renewed discussions on the transport sector are planned, in particular on CO2 fleet limits for the automotive industry and the recast Renewable Energy Directive (RED II). The conference organisers believe that renewable fuels play a crucial part in implementation of the "Green Deal" and in achieving a defossilised transport sector, as the combustion engine will continue to play an important role in years to come.

More information:

https://www.fuels-of-the-future.com/press/news/?tx_ttnews%5Byear%5D=2020&tx_ttnews%5Bmonth%5D=01&tx_ttnews%5Bday%5D=20&tx_ttnews%5Btt_news%5D=201&cHash=dad7027486861c6e5e318dde89568639